

Quirious consumer

It's raining, it's pouring, Shuellas are alluring

By Kelly Haramis

If you don't want to ruin those suede Jimmy Choos when it's raining, slip on the Shuella.

Chicagoan Rebecca Miller created the Shuella (an umbrella for shoes) because she could find nothing fashionable and functional to protect her shoes.

The PVC, slip-free-sole Shuellas are packaged inside a small pouch portable enough to fit in your purse or briefcase.

Q donned a pair of non-designer heels—and the Shuella—on a recent rainy night. The outcome: Our shoes stayed dry. The Shuella, on the other hand, had gathered water and dirt, which we wiped off with a cloth included with the product.

The Shuella is available in sizes 5-11 and colors of Hot Pink, Apple Green, Buttercup Yellow and Classic Black. Shuella costs $49.95 at Nordstrom and you can also order them at Shuella.com (where they offer Free Shipping).